HELA & MALICIOUS MAGIC

Many of today's so-called pagans while claiming to reject christianity and all its facets, continue to cling to its 'morals' (sic). They have, sadly, ingrained these distortions into the pagan way of life so much so that they have become accepted as fact by those without the fortitude to investigate for themselves. The result of this has been the emphasis on the limp-wristed 'wiccan rede' and in conjunction with this, the naive belief that ancient Celtic and Norse magic was all smiles. Nobody performed malicious magic, and if they did they would certainly get their come-uppance from the Almighty Karma.

Common sense and history prove the fallacy of this thinking. Magic is an extension of one's emotions. To do away with hateful magic or any other emotive type, would mean destroying or suppressing the appropriate emotion. The result of this is the disruption of polarity and therefore an imbalance within the individual; just look at any christian.

This 'New Age' illusion of a Golden Age without malevolence has meant that they have to brush over or completely ignore deities and forces of a sinister nature. They chose to disregard the forces that were given equal importance in authentic pagan beliefs. This is the case with the Norse goddessHELA, whose relevance has been pushed aside by the more mainstream 'Norse' practitioners.In their books Hela is usually relegated to a few lines explaining her as Queen of the Dead and daughter of Loki. While this is true, it falls short of explaining Hela's full and fundamental nature and role.

Hela's existence is purely sinister.Far from being a simple ruler of the dead, she is a force in nature. She is the dark aspect of the Prima Mater, in contrast to the light side of Nerthus and Frigg. As a dark deity Hela's nature is entropic and this nature is a manifestation of Wyrd:

> "the force behind the manifest multiverse is known as Wyrd... Wyrd can never be known,understood or experienced directly."
> -Hawk Helsson (Balder)

Hela as a manifestation of Wyrd is the path to experience the partaking of this force. No one can hope to fully control the power of Wyrd, but they who work with it via Hela become instrumental in the workings of nature as agents of it. By understanding the workings of Wyrd they are able to apply this knowledge to their own lives.

To access the power of Wyrd is to reach the power of the Prima Mater, to be one with the earth; for dark Hela is the very soul of the Prima Mater. The power of Wyrd as manifested in Hela mirrors the more cosmic nature of the Uralten, and because the former implies the earth, it is in some ways more assessible.

A form of channeling the destructive powers of Hela for magical purposes is the magic of the Nithsong or Niding poles.These were poles of up to nine feet long on which were mounted a horse's skull. On the shaft of the pole curses and insults were carved in the runic script. Runes used for destructive purposes could be triple Thurisaz runes or triple Isa runes. These would cause a weakening of the enemy's will, making them vulnerable to further attack.

The pole was erected with the skull facing the abode of the magician's enemy. The Niding Pole conducts the powers of Hel contained within the earth, like a flow of electricity, and projects them through the skull to the detriment of the enemy. Further, the Niding Pole is intended to disturb and enrage earth spirits that reside in that particular ground and cause them to seek vengence on the owner of the land; i.e. the enemy of the magician.

Hela must reclaim the recognition she so rightly deserves. Her vital role as a weaver of Wyrd's web must be acknowledged, but for now those who already know her power shall triumph, working within and without the tangled web of Wyrd.....

ZHIRINOVSKY - HAIL !

As we've commented on previously in The Heretic, Yeltsin is a latter-day Kerensky. Like Kerensky, Yeltsin is the choice of world plutocracy, but he won't hold his position. The Russian folk will forever reject democracy as alien to their inner being; their darkest soul.

Although Russians voted for Yeltsin's proposal to strengthen the presidency, some 22% made it clear that their choice for that position is not Yeltsin but Zhirinovsky. Despite the cynical naming of his party as Liberal democratic, Zhirinovsky has been identified as "fascist" by his enemies, a label which may in this instance be apt. His black-shirted militiamen sent 10 volunteers to Iraq in 1992 to help Saddam "fight American imperial-

Z's outspoken expressions on the Jews & the "Yellow Peril" are appeals to the Shadow Self of the Russian folk, just as National Socialism appealed to the shadow of the German volk as defined by Jung. Such an appeal is unstoppable.

The deep running black waters of the Russian soul do not flow well into the cesspool of democracy that the plutocrats planned for Russia on the way to their "New World Order".

The World According to Zhirinovsky

"I will bring Russia up off its knees."

"All we want is three countries: Afghanistan, Iran and Turkey. Russia can play an historic role in saving the world from the spread of Islam, from the spread of international terrorism."

"We should think about saving the white race because today the white race is a minority in the world. It is a minority that needs to be protected and saved. If we don't fight against this danger—the Islamic danger, the Asian danger—then in the future we will have a religious danger and, finally, religious wars where we will all be swamped by what is called the Yellow Peril."

"I will never agree with the situation where 2 million Russian Jews rule a country where another 150 million Russians simply have to obey them."

"Apparently we must deal with [minorities] as America did with the Indians and Germany did with the Jews."

"THAT'S WHAT POLITICS IS ALL ABOUT—DEMAGOGUERY."

"Politics is 70% lies and terror. Without lies and terror, you can't do politics... But I personally always tell the truth."

"I will immediately declare a dictatorship—the country cannot afford democracy for now. I will stabilize the situation in just two months."

"Those who have to be arrested will be arrested quickly at night. I may have to shoot 100,000 people, but the other 300 million will live peacefully. I have the right to shoot these 100,000. I have this right as President."

"I am moderate in all things."

Former SS soldier hosts Zhirinovsky

REICHENFELS (Austria), Dec 22. — Russian ultra-nationalist leader Vladimir Zhirinovsky was the guest today of a former Waffen SS elite Nazi soldier in a remote Alpine village.

Zhirinovsky, who shocked both the West and Russian reformers with his success in Russia's parliamentary elections, had already met German far-right leader Gerhard Frey in Munich airport yesterday.

"I've never stood on skis in the Alps before," he told journalists at a mountainside hotel in Reichenfels, in southern Austria's Alpine foothills.

"I want to rest for a few days or hours and enjoy the wonderful air and mountains."

Zhirinovsky's host was Edwin Neuwirth, a 67-year-old businessman who admits to right-wing views but says he is politically inactive and does not support extremism. He also admits having being a volunteer in Hitler's Waffen SS.

"Why should I deny it?," he said. "I'm proud to have been part of it. It's not every one who can say that." — Reuter

The second monograph to be published by The Black Order, The Germanic Atlantis is mainly a compact synopsis of the research of Jurgen Spanuth, but also draws on other researchers such as Dr Barry Fell.

Correcting the time estimate that had previously put Atlantis at 11,000 years ago, thus rendering its existence implausible, it is now traced to 3,000 years ago, on the basis that the Egyptians reckoned a month as a year. This brings us to the 13th Century BC, and identifies the Atlanteans as the Sea Peoples.

Atlantis is placed in the North Sea, specifically Heligoland. The Atlantic Sea in those days was the name given to the North Sea and the Baltic. Thus attempts to locate Atlantis beneath today's Atlantic Ocean are futile.

The Plato narratives on Atlantis, as derived from the Egyptians via Solon, are examined to identify the location of Atlantis. For e.g. it was a place where both amber and copper were mined. Heligoland is the only site where both copper and amber occur.

The natural catastrophes which shook the world during the 13th C.BC drying up the Nile, rendering Libya as a desert, and submerging Atlantis, are examined and the legends confirmed by archaeology and geology.

From the destruction of Atlantis, the migrations of the Germanic Atlantean/North Sea Peoples are traced. Illustrated, fully documented. $4.00 from Realist Publications, Box 38-262 Wgtn. Mail Centre, N.Z.

WEWELSBURG - HIMMLER'S BLACK CAMELOT

Wewelsburg Castle in Westphalia, Germany, is a site of significant historical and magical interest. Its historical significance lies in the fact that it was chosen by Reichsfuhrer-SS Heinrich Himmler to be the centre of his Order of the SS and an ideological training centre for SS officers. Its magical interest is that Himmler ordered the construction of two magical chambers on the north tower of Wewelsburg in which he intended to perform his own magical ceremonies.

Unfortunately there is no English language book on Schloss Wewelsburg at this time. There are two German language books which deal specifically with Wewelsburg: the first Wewelsburg 1933 bis 1945: SS Kult-und Terrorstatte by Prof. Dr. Karl Huser. The second, Heinrich Himmler's Burg. Das Weltanschauliche Zentrum der SS, Bildchronik der SS-Schule Haus Wewelsburg 1934-1945 by Stuart Russell and Jost W Schneider. At the present time the author Stuart Russell is working on a definitive study of Wewelsburg which will be the first and long-awaited English language book dealing with Wewelsburg during the Third Reich. This writer has visited Wewelsburg on two separate occasions and carried out his own Magical Working in the "Walhalla" and met with the author Stuart Russell. This brief article is inteded to shed some light on the mysterious castle and share some of its secrets with those who are not fluent in German until such time as Russel's book Himmler's Castle is available.

Wewelsburg takes its name from the robber knight Wewl von Buren. It was built between 1604 and 1607 on the ruins of a much older Saxon stronghold. It served as a secondary residence for the Prince Bishop of Paderborn, Theodor von Furstenberg, before eventually coming under the control of the county of Buren. A Latin inscription above the main gate reads, "Many would like to enter but they never will".

Himmler first visited the castle on November 3, 1933 and was immediately impressed by the triangular structure. He was searching for a suitable castle in Westphalia in which he could establish an SS leadership school. Himmler's attention had been drawn to the Wewelsburg by Karl-Maria Wiligut/Weisthor, an ex-Austrian colonel and researcher of prehistoric and Germanic matters.

THE SS CASTLE

Wiligut had joined the SS in 1933 and rose to the rank of Brigadefuhrer by 1936. He had told Himmler of an old prophecy which said that "a gigantic storm would appear out of the east to overwhelm the German peoples if not confronted and turned back in the region of Westphalia". On July 27, 1934 the Nazi Party leased the castle from the county of Buren for the symbolic sum of one Reichsmark per year. Himmler appointed the architect Hermann Bartels to reconstruct and expand the castle.

RECONSTRUCTION

The reconstruction cost 13 Million Marks, and prisoners from the nearby concentration camp KZ Neiderhagen worked on it .Bartels was commissioned to draw up ever larger plans for an "SS CITY" which would have taken 20 years to complete and would have cost the sum of 250 Million Marks.

Construction began with the creation of an SS Guardhouse and Barracks and an SS sentry box. The planned expansion of the castle would have swallowed up the whole of the village of Wewelsburg and the SS planned to relocate the villagers in a new model town nearby.

The mighty north tower of the Wewelsburg was torn down and rebuilt to include the marbled floored "Gruppenfuhrersaal" or Hall of Pillars.

WALHALLA

There were 12 pillars in this room as well as 12 radiators and 12 niches. The black design on the marble floor had 12 rays coming forth in the form of reversed Sig-runes. An April 1945 photo shows the pillars in this hall having been whitewashed under which were paintings of humanoid figures. It was possible that these paintings were of German heroes of times past. The old cellars of the north tower became the "Gruft" Crypt or "Walhalla", Hall of Dead Heroes. This area also used the number 12, as there were 12 stone pedastals around the walls of this circular dome-shamed room. Construction work ceased in 1944, having been only temporarily stopped by the outbreak of the War. Plans for the SS City continued to be drawn up however until 1945.

Model of planned SS City

Swastika in the roof of the "Walhalla"

Architectural drawings by Bartels show the Wewelsburg complex project in the form of a spear with the north tower of the Wewelsburg itself as the tip and head of this spear. Both the "Gruppenfuhrersaal" and the "Walhalla" were constructed for special ceremonies and there are indications that either Himmler or Hitler were to be buried there. As the construction proceeded a schoolhouse was set up. By 1938 a library of 16,000 books had been accumulated together with an early photocopying machine and bookbinding ing facilities.

RESEARCH CENTRE

There was also a museum housed in one of the wings of the castle and a staff of archaeologists. Ahnenerbe (Ancestral Heritage) staff were posted at Wewelsburg who worked alongside the scholastic staff. Prof. Dr. Walter Rust, curator of the Ahnenerb was appointed as Scholastic Staff Supervisor in 1938. They studied and carried out excavations at the nearby "Externsteine" stones in the Teutoberer Wald (Forest). These were Germanic holy relics and possibly the location of the famous Pagan "Irminsul", the sacred relic of the Saxons which was destroyed by Charlemagne.

CENTRE OF THE WORLD

The Wewelsburg was to become the ideological school where SS officers were ideologically and spiritually trained. It was envisaged by Himmler as the "Mittelpunkt der Welt", the Centre of the World, and indeed this centre-point was the centre of the "Black Sun" design on the marbled floor of the "Gruppenfuhrersaal". (See illustration on p. 7)

Originally a gold disc was set in the middle of this design but was looted at the end of the war. Looking closely at the design one can see a slight depression in this "Black Sun" where the gold disc once rested! Directly beneath this design is the swastika in the roof of the "Walhalla".

Himmler visited the castle 40 times between Feb. 1936 and Dec. 1937. Many high ranking Nazi officials visited the castle including the Deputy Fuhrer Hess in March 1936. In a speech in Munich on 8 Jan. 1938 Himmler stated that "Future initiation ceremonies for the Gruppenfuhrer including those who have not as yet been sworn in, will be conducted at Wewelsburg." At a Gruppenfuhrer conference at Wewelsburg between 11-15 June 1941, Himmler revealed to his SS Officers the plans for the invasion of the USSR. As the fortunes of the war turned against the Third Reich the role of Wewelsburg became less important and staff were transferred to combat posts. In 1944 it was given a coat of camouflage paint, and fearing the castle would be bombed by Allied forces Himmler had his vast collection of art treasures and weaponry moved to a country estate. On 30 March 1945 the castle garrison was evacuated and they took many files with them to the Sennelager army base at Paderborn.

DEMOLITION

Himmler personally instructed SS-Hauptsturmfuhrer Heinz Macher to destroy the Wewelsburg Castle to prevent its falling intact into the hands of the advancing US 3rd Armoured Division. On 31 March 1945 Macher and his squad of demolition troops arrived in the village, setting fire to thecastle and firing anti-tank rockets at the burning building. Macher did not have enough explosives to totally destroy the formidible structure and both the "Walhalla" and the "Gruppenfuhrersaal" were spared and still stand today as in 1945.

American forces arrived at Wewelsburg on 2 April 1945. Capt. Theodore M. Black of CIC (Counter Intelligence Corps) inspected the ruins and found and kept a cigar box full of 200 SS Totenkopf Rings, an SS Banner and an SS typewriter with an SS rune key. He distributed many of the rings back in the USA to men of his unit. The Rings which were awarded by Himmler to SS Officers had to be returned to Wewelburg on the death of the wearer. Despite this fact, rumours of buried treasure in the surrounding area of Wewelsburg persist. Many other myths surrounding the Wewelsburg persist. today fostered by books dealing with the hidden "occult" sciences of the Third Reich.

One of the principal myths is that there was a large round oak table in the Gruppenfuhrersaal around which Himmler and 12 of his Obergruppenfuhrers sat on leather high-backed chairs like King Arthur and his Knights of the Round Table. Not so. The leather chairs do exist but the round table never was. The table was long and rectangular and situated in the Soung wing of the castle, not in the "Gruppenfuhrersaal".

Today the Wewelsburg has been happily restored and houses a Youth Hostel and the County museum. The former SS Guardhouse now houses a museum of artifacts and documentation from the time of the SS occupation o of Wewelsburg. ANTONY PARKIN

REVIEWS

Foundations of the 21st Century by K Bolton. $3.00 from Realist Publications.

Within 13 pages are possibly some of the most misanthropic aphorisms ever written.

Headings are: In Praise of the Few, Mass Man: An Indictment, Politics & State, Morality & Religion, Bioethics, and A New Mythos.

The opening words are an antithetical paraphrase of Marx's opening words in his "Communist Manifesto": "The history of all hitherto existing society is the history of outstanding individuals."

The author denounces democracy, humanitarianism, orthodox morality, the Welfare State, religion, rationalism and the masses. He champions the outstanding individual, the instinctual, eugenics and social Darwinism.

Politics is described as the art of pressing the masses to the service of "Higher Man" . There are no "rights" other than what are fought for, and these together with such notions as the "dignity of labour" are mere slogans to maintain the power of a ruling class, or overthrow it.

The value of a State is judged not on the "happiness of the greatest number " of its citizens, but the extent to which it causes Culture to flourish. "Equality" is condemned as blind faith, and "universal education" as an unrealistic panacea for all social ills.

Guaranteed to outrage all people of goodwill and social conscience.

National Socialist Essays and Physis: Essays in Praise of National Socialism, by Wulstan Tedder, each 13pp. 1 Pound, overseas $US5 incl. airmail each, from The Rigel Press, Box 228, York YO1 2YZ, England.

National Socialism is surely this century's most heretical political form, antithetical to everything held sacred by christians, liberals and humanitarians. Anyone who dares offer even an objective opinion on it is subjected to a virtual inquisiton: fines, imprisonment, even assassination.

Wulstand Tedder presents his views on NS in a unique way. He is a classical scholar with several Greek drama translations to his credit, & looks at NS as a continuation of the Greek ethos.

Tedder compares NS to Greek paganism - both are concerned with a balanced harmony with nature, the basis of which is the folk community. The individual fulfils his destiny by recognizing himself to be part of that community. This is contrasted with the utopian, abstract ideas of liberalism, democracy, multi-racialism, whose quest for "equality" can only be established by coercion.

Tedder states that the basis of a civilization is not its material objects, but its ideal of the warrior, portrayed in the Greek classics and in the Anglo-Saxon epic Beowulf. But generations of Western youth have been raised on christian-derived virtues of cowardice and meekness. Such ideas have been continued by liberalism and Marxism. The modern epic of the NS struggle - particularly the heroism of the WaffenSS - is held to be the stuff that can inspire a revival of the warrior ethos.

The publication on "Physis" describes it as a Western Martial Art aiming to train the future warriors of the Aryan folk community. Its basis is pagan - a recognition of the balance between the individual, the folk, and nature (or the gods). The destiny of the warrior is to fight for the creation of a "Faustian Empire".

"Physis", we're told, derives from a Greek word meaning "nature" and "natural unfolding", including the nature or character of a person. Tedder refers to the Greek ideal of balance, the attaining of the gods' favour by striving for excellence, a pagan conception devoid of moralizing.

"In a very important sense, NS can be considered as a modern expression of the insights which founded and maintained the civilization of ancient Greece", and the pre-christian "Western" ethos generally.

Other essays include a discussion of Greek drama, NS as genuine democracy, and the continuing power of NS symbols.

N.S. Principles & Ideals by Wulstan Tedder, 16pp, 1 Pound 50p ($US7.00) from Rigel Press.

Another in the series on this most heretical of political forms. This booklet contains 3 chapters - Basic Principles & Ideals of N.S., Social Engineering & Zionist Control, and Destiny of the West. An Appendix is entitled Freedom: The Illusion.

NS is described as "a conscious and practical expression of the wisdom of civilization - it enshrines ... those factors which make civilization possible..."

One of the most fundamental principles is that each individual is a part of and has duties towards his own folk, rather than existing as a solitary being. It gets back to the ancient Greek concept of balance, between the individual, the community, and the folk, "and what is beyond these: Nature, or the 'God/Gods'".

Civilization is defined as a certain way of living, arising when a challenge has been overcome as the result of two primary qualities: heroism and creativity. A civilization, as distinct form a culture, is "dynamic, creative, and expansionist." "A Civilization also possesses a heightened sense of identity among its communities, and a sense of destiny..."

"Social Engineering" examines how certain moral abstractions are pervasive in Western society, and how these are maintained by laws repressing genuine dissent in such matters as egalitarianism and multiculturalism. The genuine ethos of the West has been replaced by what is "essentially based on the 'christian view of the world'. christianity is fundamentally a utopian liberal-socialist doctrine: a contradiction par excellence of the warrior values and way of life. Christian values & ideas are anathema to the noble, conquering spirit of any civilization."

The ethos of the West is termed Promethean or 'Thorian', "asserting breeding and character, and extolling the overcoming of challenges."

Those held responsible for foistering the unWestern dogmas are the Zionists, who created social anthropology & sociology to emasculate the Western psyche.

In "The Destiny of the West" the Thorian ethos is described as having been for a long time in a struggle against the christian distortion. The Renaissance represented a triumph of the Thorian ethos. But the various mutations of christianity continued to infect the West, one of which was Marxism.

NS, contends Tedder, gave the West the conscious apprehension of its destiny and its struggle provides the West with a "new heroic epic" comparable to the epics of Homer and Virgil re. Classical Civilization.

The Destiny of the West under NS would be the creation of a Western Imperium which would see the harnessing of science and technology to conquer space, and the continued evolution of humankind to higher forms.

A RUNIC PATHWORKING

Pathworking is a simple yet affective way of evoking the archetypes of the collective unconscious of our ancestors.

Pathworking is meditation upon a symbol, and the observation in the mind's eye of the images and ideas that arise spontaneously from one's unconscious.

The working is described as follows:

Sowilo

The first sight is that of a revolving sun.

I walk through a field and descend a cliff face. On the way down a raven lands on my left shoulder. On the ground below a wolf awaits.

I walk towards a village, the raven and wolf having departed.

A shaman sits by a fire outside casting runes. He has a long beard.

I enter a long hall and sit at a table, at which are warriors. At the head of the table the chief stands, talking.

A maiden serves drink. She has plaited hair, and is simply dressed.

This is a war council, and the people are Swedes.

Comment: Much imagery here can be directly related to the sowilo rune. Sowilo later displaced the Tiwaz rune as a symbol of victory.

Sowilo itself is a sun-symbol, hence the swirling sun encountered initially. The raven and the wolf are creatures of Odin, and feast upon the slain.

LETTERS

I think you have hit on a basic human instinct in the formation of The Black Order - that of people wishing to be surrounded with those of like physical and mental characteristics, like ethnic group, and like beliefs. I completely understand that this is not a 'neo-nazi' or 'white-supremacist' organization although those opposed to such ethnic and heritage-celebrating notions will certainly claim that it is. I speak for myself when I state that I am proud to be of German heritage - and likewise, Northern European in general - these were strong, resourceful people and as histort proves, have been a dominant force in the development of the entire world. If I am faulted by those who desire a dysgenic melting-pot of alien cultures and beliefs then so be it. I particularly think that it is important to 'rehabilitate' the fyflot cross/sunwheel/ swastika/ double iwaz runes, as you have in the symbol of The Black Order: this is an incredibly potent symbol and should no longer be 'taboo' in relation to certain misconstrued historical events.

I enjoyed and was in full agreement with the Book of Wyrd. One idea that I think would be interesting would be to put out a recording of an Order ritual. ASH WEST

RESURGENCE OF THE RIGHT

After being relegated to the fringe of politics during the late 70s and the 80s the "Right" is once again on the march.

The Republicans in Germany, heirs to the early successes of the NPD in the 60s, are a major political force with representation in parliament.

The MSI in Italy have regained their former broad support.

The British National Party, a breakaway from the National Front, is now beginning to achieve the respectable votes that the NF gained in the 70s. Indeed the election of BNP candidate Derek Beackon to Tower Hamlets Council last year with 33.9% of the vote caused Leftist riots and condemnations by such illustrious personalities as PM Major and the Archbishop of Canterbury.

As we can see from the item below the Rightist parties in France and Austria are also making strides. Indeed, several years ago the French Establishment felt obliged to change the electoral system just to try and halt the electoral successes of the Front Nationale.

DEREK BEACKON

The Right Increases Its Bite

The stunning performance by the ultra-nationalist Liberal Democratic Party in Russia's parliamentary elections last week was only the latest example of right-wing or extremist parties' surprising wins during the past year:

COUNTRY: DATE	VOTERS SHIFT
Italy: Dec. 1993	Gianfranco Fini's neofascist Italian Social Movement wins 16.4% of the vote in 428 municipal elections throughout the country, adding 14 new mayors.
Austria: May 1993	Jörg Haider's right-wing Freedom Party wins 12% of the vote in provincial elections in Lower Austria.
France: March 1993	Jean-Marie Le Pen's right-wing National Front wins 12.5% of the vote in parliamentary elections with anti-immigrant rhetoric.
Germany: March 1993	Former Waffen SS Sergeant Franz Schönhuber's Republikaner Party wins 9.5% of the vote in local elections in the financial capital of Frankfurt.

TIME, DECEMBER 27, 1993

CROATIA & LATVIA

In Croatia the flag of the pre- and wartime fascist Ustasha is flown in the streets, and government institutions are named after wartime Ustasha government leaders. An 'international brigade' of 120 French, British, German, and Australian National socialists fight alongside Croatian regulars.

Latvia has a government which is overtly pro-NS. A government school textbook talks of Jews oppressing Latvia under Communism. The Government's "Home Guard" includes two units of "Old Warriors", vets of the Waffen SS, who wear the old uniforms and sing the old songs.

The museum, formerly an anti-Nazi propaganda showpiece under the Soviets, now celebrates Latvia's alliance with Germany against the USSR during World War II.

Several years ago Latvia's president Gorbunovs stated before a Holocaust memorial celebration that the Jews had caused their own suffering by supporting the Communists.

The Aizsargi, an NS movement founded before the war, has re-emerged with 14,000 members, led by Waffen SS vets Janis Riba and Victors Saris.

THE NATURAL ORDER

All around us is, seemingly, chaos, but is that not in itself a sort of order? While there are those who continue to promote the idea that all 'human' life has equal value, there are those who welcome the violence as a challenge to their manhood, and are prepared to pick up the gauntlet and remove some of the 'useless eaters' from this world. There is an indelible order here written on the inner-workings of every 'animal'. Failure to obey this law of the jungle is unnatural and suicidal.

#1. All life exists to exist, and at any cost! More often than not the higher the cost that a speciman pays, the higher the standard of living is for that organism. Furthermore, it appears that the more bloodthirsty a species is, the more advanced it progressively becomes.

#2 All life exists to relentlessly - instinctively - continue the bloodline. Any species that will not fight for its females will become miscegenated and eventually extinct.

There is no room for watered-down moralism; only constantly encroaching reality! Survival and procreation are good; extinction and miscegenation are evil. Humans are the highest form of mammal, yet at times appear to be the most self-destructive.

Essentially, the natural goal of a species should be the establishment of an ever-expanding territory free of outside influence. This allows for the unhindered sexual propagation of that kind. To continue this positive trend that group must create a culture that promotes these goals. In essence, sex and violence make the world go 'round.

Things progressing in cycles as they do, we must accept the death of this modern way of life, and the rebirth of the savage existence of our ancestors, relishing in the strong, archetypal ideal that flows in the subconscious.

The time has come to make way for the strong, those who would make peace with an iron fist and a steel-toed boot. There has been a considerable amount of evidence coming from a number of historical sources that would indicate that the agricultural revolution commonly thought of as the dawn of 'civilization', owes much to cannibalism and extreme brutality. There also appears to be a strong link between post-agricultural societies and aggressive exocannibalism, yielding the conclusion that the more advanced and sophisticated the tribes are also the most savage and primal. Historical and mythological sources would seem to corroborate this. A perfect e.g. of this bloody 'manifest destiny', would be the rapid ascension to power of the U.S. at the cost of decimating much of the native American population, and the importation of Africans as slaves.

There is a theory that homosapien man may have eaten his way to the top of the evolutionary ladder, crushing those weaker than him. This is said to be the source from where man's cruelty and aggressions stem. Even sexuality has been correlated as coming from the same instinct. Camille Paglia wrote: "sexual intercourse, from kissing to penetration, consists of barely controlled cruelty and consumption."

Our once healthy society saw no need to over-analyze these instincts, and set about satisfying the carnal desires of a consumer society, using sex and the drive to kill and consume to sell everything. Even many religions employ this mentality, only on a more subtle controlling level. So we see beneath the veneer of civilized man a brazen and carnal beast, and happy is he who realizes this, and sets out to carve a bit of order for his existence, using a blade of chaos to cut a swath in the sea of worthlessness. -ASH WEST

BLACK ORDER

STRATEGY & TACTICS

The Black Order has NOT been formed as a mere study group or publishing enterprise. There are a sufficient number of those around already. Nor is it intended to be a past-time for the bored to engage in ritual and occultic fantasies that have no inner meaning.

TBO exists to activate forces, energies and people, according to the Wyrd of the present Civilization and the post-Western Aeon. Our aims and strategy must be practical and pragmatic/dialectical.

Here are some suggestions.

(1) Build The Black Order. The most obvious aim. Expand membership and undertake to organize your own local Lodge. But we must never loose sight of the fact of maintaining a high standard of membership. Those wishing to join must either be recommended by an existing member, or write a 500-word autobiography which may result in them being sent an application if they are deemed suitable. We will run ads. where apt.

(2) Pooling Creativity. Each member should consider what talents and qualifications s/he has which may be of service to our Work: whether in art, computers, music, writing, publishing, political agitation and organizing...

(3) Form parties, groups, fronts, whether cultural, youth, political... to permeate our ideas into society on a myriad of levels.

(4) Join existing outfits and influence them, and recruit from them for TBO. The most obvious ones would be cultural, youth, N.S./Rightist. However, influencing the Left may also be considered by utilizing the folk-communitarian and proto-sociobiological views of original Anarchist thinkers such as Proudhon, Bakunin and Kropotkin.

Within the Right/N.S. promote pagan revivalism, and expose the Christian Identity rubbish at every opportunity.

Some less obvious groups which should be considered are those concerned with such issues as euthanasia: here stress that it's the christian and liberal moralism on the "sanctity" of ALL human life which is the major barrier to their aims. Join atheist/humanist/rationalist groups and promote the anti-christian philosophy of Nietzsche as an alternative to the liberal crap that infests most of the atheist societies..

(5) Think and act dialectically. The sinister dialectic should be the basis of our strategy. This may even involve promoting ideas, groups and causes which are quite adverse to our own philosophy, simply as a means of disrupting the Old Aeon and aggravating its weaknesses. Be pragmatic and look at the long-term and the whole picture. As Nietzsche said: "Push the falling."

(6) Cultivate alliances. Obvious ones would be with such groups as the Fraternity of Balder, Peter Gilmore's Order of Fenris, O.N.A., and Michael Moynihan's Blood Axis.

We welcome your comments and further suggestions.

NEWS COMMENTARY

In recent months a bit has come to light about U.S. medical experiments on their own citizens. 23 pregnant women were injected with radioactive iron in the 1950s. In 1965 elderly people of good health were fed radioactive paint chips at a New England hospital. Prior to 1953, the Walter E. Fernald State School supplied retarded patients as research subjects to Beth Israel Hospital as part of nuclear medicine tests.

The tests were part of Cold War experiments.

The point I wish to make is that the US Establishment was a principal in setting up the War Crimes Trials to murder German leaders after World War II. Among the charges levelled against some were the medical experiments allegedly caried out at concentration camps to find a treatment for frozen airmen forced to land in the North Sea.

While Germany must forever prostrate herself before the world, the revelations of US Cold War experiments cause a bit of a flutter but don't so much as dent the moral facade of good 'ol Uncle Sam and his bastard culture. Hypocrisy is the mainstay of democracy.

THE HERESY OF SATANISM & ITS LINKS WITH NORTHERN PAGANISM

Satanism is a modern heresy because it's unashamedly elitist. It is an old heresy because it condradicts the anti-life moralizing of the Nazarene faith.

Satanism is the name given to a certain way of living. This way is magickal in that the everyday world is seen as only part of what actually exists: it is believed that there is a hidden or 'occult' aspect and Satan, whether understood as a symbol or an actual entity, is an important part of this.

Traditionally, Satan is regarded as evil, as Satanism is usually understood as the worhsip of evil. However, Satanists see things differently - they regard evil as a relative value, something which does not exist by itself. In simple terms, evil is what your opponents do.

Satanists see life as a struggle - something that most people today, pampered as they are by the comforts of civilization, seem to have forgotten. Without struggle there is decadence, the pettiness of ordinary life where instinct has lost to pretension, intellectual cleverness, and where what is easy is preferred to what is challenging. The rituals, ceremonies and forces of magick - correctly understood, vitalize, they return instinct, make us aware of the possibilities life offers. Magick gives a greater perspective - it enhances life. the fact that this is so seldom appreciated shows just how stupid most 'magickians' are. In simple terms, magic destroys the drabness of everyday life.

Magick, for Satanists, is a weapon used in the struggle of life: it shows us that there is a path which leads to self-divinity. Self-divinity is basically being intoxicated by life itself - living on a higher level of intensity. We can be great if we follow greatness, but most people are just plain lazy.

Satanismwastes no time on these, and this is why it is elitist. It guides those who dare, but it is 'totally' indifferent to the great majority who lack this spirit of defiance. Satanism is ruthless in practice because it subjects those who dare to tests and hardships:and these either break the individuals or make them more determined. Those who are broken are forgotten.They are failures.

Yet satanism (of the genuine sort anyway) encourages those values which, for instance, the religion of the Nazarene has always despised because the philosophy of Yeshua is basicalliy the philosophy of scum, the weak, the failures, & the detestable. These values are honourr to one's own kind (there is no meaning to honour beyond one's own kind), nobility and excellence.

It has been said (by Nietzsche) "The more mediocre, the weaker, the more submissive and cowardly a man is, the more he will posit as evil: it is with him that the realm of evil is most comprehensive. The basest man will see the realm of evil - that is, of that which is forbidden and hostile to him - everywhere." And again: "The most powerful man, the creator would have to be the most evil, in as much as he carries his ideal against the ideals of other men and remakes them in his own image. Evil here means: hard, painful, enforced.... Terribleness is part of greatness - let us not deceive ourselves."

Such sentiments capture the essence of Satanism - and represent as well those instincts that gave rise to northern paganism: a joy in struggle (including war) and a joy in challenges.

One of the most pathetic things in occultism today are the pacifist cretins who have the baseness to talk of being 'chaos warriors' or of following the 'warrior way'. Such people are laughable - they want a safe life, with just a little bit of magick (but not too much) to delude themselves that they are not as worthless as they are. They not only lack the self-discipline of the magickian, but are so puffed up by their inverted values (of which pacifism is but one) that they have forgotten what life is all about - real, bloody struggle. Such cretins can only exist within a soft society which usually financially supports them because they have no instinct for survival. A warrior is someone trained to kill - someone who can stand the stench of death, the sight of blood and gore. But most importantly, a warrior fights with nobility for a cause. And when not fighting, takes his fill of life. Chaos 'warriors' of course, fight (verbally) about big ideas & fight their way to the nearest bear trying to out-swagger each other by indulging in anarchic behaviour. A few really gentle modern 'warriors' may speak softly as they dream of a pleasant life sometime in the future...

Not for them - or any occultists outside the Satanic tradition - the self-overcoming of the genuine warrior: the physical challenges, the trials of will, the pains, joys and slow learning that real struggle brings. It is all cerebral among the occultists of today: all ritualized into stupid magickal 'workings' instead of being part of every moment of life, as it was in times past when northern paganism flourished.

Satanism returns both the everyday reality of struggle and that magickal aspect of life which most people have forgotten about. It returns, in short, empathy and instinct - providing a means of self-training to enable individuals to enjoy the struggle of life, rise above it, and achieve through it personal greatness.

Central to this is another modern heresy: as individuals we cannot escape our heritage. Our magick is most effective when we as individuals are in harmony with our instincts: that is, in tune with the past that has made us possible. Our past means our ancestors - for, little though it be understood by the stupid multitudes, our spirit, destiny or wyrd as individuals is linked to that of our ancestors. In 'occult' terminology of the fashionable kind, this means that our True Will is linked to the spirit of the race to which we belong, this spirit being, in many ways, most evident in the religious attitude of our ancestors.

This truth is so fundamental, it is not surprising that it is either ignored or derided today, so warped have most people become (partly because of centuries of Nazarene indoctrination) - so far removed from their instincts. Hence the stupidity of using the Qabala & hence the gormless system of Crowley et. al; systems totally at variance with our natural instincts. Thus the Satanist contempt for such systems and the bovine people who use them.

Thus also, the Satanist use of northern pagan traditions: traditions which enshrine the instincts of most northern Europeans & thus enable true insight and achievement.

So then: rant away at us - throw at us dumb words and epithets; we Satanists do not care. Those who cannot ignore words are not the ones for us; those who cannot defy all labels are still trapped by Nazarene duality - little though they realize it.
